

Why Should We Care About Development Finance? ...because it's our money!

Volume 6, Issue 13, September 23, 2022

The Economy This Week!

On one hand, international experts are asking if a global recession is Imminent, on the other hand, foreign banks and rating agencies are increasingly betting on India's growth potential as an investment destination. Meanwhile, in the country, the finance minister's words pleading for more investments are falling on deaf ears. Are the investors really motivated is the question.

At the same time, people are marching for an accountability bill to bring transparency in the functioning of the governments. Similar efforts are needed in the infrastructure sector too, where crores of funds are promised, yielding little to no actual results, the smart city mission being a case in the point.

We are hiring a research associate/assistant in the energy team, share or apply if you fit the bill.

While Finance Minister was sleeping, credit outflows inverted

FM Nirmala Sitharaman is disheartened that industry is not investing in manufacturing, despite the corporate tax cut of Sept 2019 and the production-linked incentive (PLI) introduced in Feb 2021. She went on to comparing them with 'Hanuman', the monkey god who was reminded of his forgotten power and coaxed to fly over seas to look for the abducted Sita.

History in the making: March for Accountability Act in Rajasthan

Jawabdehi Yatra organised by Mazdoor Kisan Shakti Sangathan (MKSS) along with 80 other organisations in Rajasthan is making history. Rajiv Gandhi once said that only 30% of the government funds reach the ultimate beneficiary. The government machinery in many states is seen as uncaring and unaccountable. Read more.

Forest at a Standstill: Development at the Cost of Sundarbans

Deemed as a "World Heritage", by the UNESCO – Sundarbans is one of the world's richest biodiversity hotspots. The region, with arguably the world's largest remaining area of mangroves, does not just support human settlements and houses a wide variety of flora, diverse fauna and rich aquatic life but is also a breeding ground for several globally threatened species.
